DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

Applicant's election without traverse of Species III (as shown in Figure 7) on April 24th, 2006 does not contain a lever as in the Species shown in Figure 10. It is recommended that in future correspondence that applicant removes the lever limitation from claim 1 in order to be claiming the elected species.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 7, 8, 10 and 11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Mencacci (US Patent 3,396,721).

Mencacci discloses a device (Figures 1 and 2) comprising: a housing having an aperture; the aperture having a nodule (2) disposed within it; a strap (9) for attaching the housing to a body; the nodule is sized such that it can apply pressure to an acupuncture point on the wrist while still avoiding adjacent areas of the wrist; a solenoid (4) is disposed within the housing and connected to a lever (3) for transmitting force to the nodule; a flexible and disposable sheet (10, 11) covers the aperture; and all solenoids are inherently capable of having their force controlled. In regard to claim 10, the solenoid is inherently capable of operating within the range of 1/3 Hz to 1/5 Hz.

Art Unit: 3733

Claims 7, 10 and 11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Simon (US Patent 5,245,989).

Simon discloses a device (Figures 1-10c) comprising: a housing (104) having an aperture (123); the aperture (123) having a nodule (114) disposed within it; a strap (103) for attaching the housing (104) to a body; the nodule is sized such that it can apply pressure to an acupuncture point on the wrist while still avoiding adjacent areas of the wrist (the eye is smaller than the wrist); a solenoid (Column 3, Lines 30-37) can be disposed within the housing and connected to a lever (121a) for transmitting force to the nodule; and all solenoids are inherently capable of having their force controlled. In regard to claim 10, the solenoid is inherently capable of operating within the range of 1/3 Hz to 1/5 Hz.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 8 and 9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Simon.

Simon discloses all of the claimed limitations except for a flexible sheet coving the aperture along with both a power supply and controller disposed within the housing. It is well known that aesthetic purposes as well as hygienic ones, that covers are used to keep working parts clean and out of sight. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to provide a flexible liner to the device of Simon in order to allow for ease of cleaning as well as hiding what is commonly considered unsightly machinery. It is also well known in the art that wireless connections allow more freedom in where a computer is located and where the usable tool is. In the case of Simon, one would prefer to allow a subject freedom to move about instead of being seated adjacent a computer to receive wired commands in terms of frequency and strength. It would have further been obvious to provide for a wireless connection in which the helmet of Simon had its own power supply and receiving controller in order to allow a patient mobility from a computer.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to the claims have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
